A Touch of Nature.

MUSIC IN CAMP.

The summer clouds lay pitched like tents
In meads of heavenly azure;
And each dread gun of the elements
Slept in its hid embrasure.

No forest leaf to quiver, And the smoke of the random cannonade Rolled softly from the river.

And now when circling hills looked down With cannon grimly planted, O'er listless camp and silent town The golden sunset slanted;

Two armies covered hill and plain Where Rappshannock's waters Ran decyly crimsoned with the stain of battle's recent slaughters.

The breezs so softly blew it made

When on the fervid air there came A strain, now rich, now tender, The music seemed itself aflame With day's departing splendor.

A Federal band, which eve and morn

Played measures brave and nimble, Had just struck up with flute and horn And lively clash of cymbal.

Down flocked the soldiers to the banks

Then all was still; and then the hand With movement light and tricksy, Made stream and forest, hill and strand, Reverberate with "Dixle."

Again a pause, and then again The trumpet pealed sonorous, And Yankee Doodle was the strain To which the shore gave chorus.

And yet once more the bugle sang

Above the stormy riot; No shout upon the evening rang— There reigned a holy quiet.

No unresponsive soul had heard

The sad, slow stream its noiseless flood Poured o'er the glistening pebbles: All silent now the Yankees stood, All silent stood the Rebels.

Of blue or gray, the soldier sees, As by the wand of fairy, The cottage neath the live-oak trees, The cabin by the prairie.

Bend in their beauty o'er him; Seen through the fear-mist in his eyes His loved ones stand before him.

In april's tearful weather, The vision vanished as the strain And daylight died together.

But memory, waked by music's art, Expressed in simplest numbers, Subdued the sternest Yankee's heart, Made light the Rebel's slumbers.

And fair the form of music shines.

That bright, celestial creature, Who still 'inid war's embattled lines Gave this one touch of nature.
